15           Petitioner James Lynn Styers has filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus alleging 16 that he is imprisoned and sentenced to death in violation of the United States Constitution.
17 (Dkt. 1.)<sup>2</sup> His amended petition, filed September 3, 1999, raised nine claims. (Dkt. 63.) In 18 an Order dated September 22, 2000, the Court determined that Claims 1, 2, 6, and 8 were 19 procedurally barred and that Claim 9 lacked merit. (Dkt. 86.) The Court found that the 20 remaining claims were properly exhausted and subject to review on the merits. (Id.)
21 Petitioner submitted a brief on the merits of these claims. (Dkt. 90.) Respondents filed a 22 response (Dkt. 97) and Petitioner filed a reply (Dkt. 101).

23           This Order addresses the merits of Claims 3, 4, 5, and 7. For the reasons set forth 24 herein, the Court finds that Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief.

BACKGROUND

The following factual summary is taken in part from the decision of the Arizona Supreme Court upholding Petitioner's murder conviction and death sentence. State v. Styers, 177 Ariz. 104, 108-09, 865 P.2d 765, 769-70 (1993).

Petitioner and his daughter shared an apartment with co-defendant Debra Milke and her son, four-year-old Christopher Milke. Petitioner, unemployed and disabled, watched Christopher during the day while Milke was at work and at night and on weekends when Milke was out with friends.

On Saturday, December 2, 1989, Petitioner and Christopher left the apartment at around 11:00 a.m, ostensibly for a trip to the Metrocenter shopping mall, where, Christopher was told, they would visit Santa Clause. Milke allowed Petitioner to use her car; his vehicle was in disrepair, and he could not afford to get it fixed.

Petitioner and Christopher picked up Petitioner's friend, co-defendant Roger Scott. Petitioner drove Scott to two drugstores and then the two men and Christopher ate lunch at a pizza parlor. After lunch, they drove out to a desert area in northwest Phoenix, where Christopher was shot to death.

Petitioner and Scott then drove to Metrocenter. They arrived at around 2:30 p.m. They separated, and Petitioner began to enact the ruse that Christopher had gone missing at the mall. He enlisted the help of a Sears employee, explaining that Christopher had disappeared from the Sears restroom. While Petitioner and the employee were searching the mall, they ran into Scott; Petitioner, feigning surprise at the encounter, asked Scott if he had seen Christopher, and Scott replied that he had not. Petitioner called mall security at 2:30 p.m. The police were called around 4:00 p.m. In his conversations with the officers, Petitioner repeated the story that he brought Christopher to Metrocenter to see Santa Claus and that he had disappeared from the Sears restroom while Petitioner was in a stall.

Later that evening, when Petitioner and a police officer were retracing Petitioner's activities, Petitioner first mentioned that he had been with Scott that day. Petitioner said that he, Christopher, and Scott ran errands and then ate lunch. He said that he took Scott

1 home and then went to the mall with Christopher.

2 Petitioner called Debra Milke several times while the police were searching 3 Metrocenter. Petitioner stayed with the police at the mall until 3:00 a.m. Officers took him
4 to the police station to get a taped statement, then took him home. Petitioner was arrested 5 on Sunday evening, December 3.

6 Scott led police to Christopher's body in the desert wash. Christopher had been 7 shot three times in the back of his head. On a road leading from the scene of the murder, 8 police located a number of spent .22 caliber shell casings and one live .22 round that were 9 similar to bullets found in Petitioner's possession and similar to the bullets removed from 10 the child's head. Police also located a pair of black tennis shoes belonging to Petitioner 11 which had been secreted in the parking lot near the Sears store. The shoes had a tread 12 pattern similar to prints found next to Christopher's body in the wash.

13 Petitioner was indicted on counts of first-degree murder, conspiracy to commit first-14 degree murder, child abuse, and kidnapping. A jury convicted him of all charges. (ROA-15 PCR 76.) With respect to the murder count, the trial court found three statutory 16 aggravating factors: that Petitioner was an adult and the victim was under age fifteen, 17 pursuant to A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(9); that the murder was committed in expectation of 18 pecuniary gain, under § 13-703(F)(5); and that the murder was committed in an especially 19 heinous and depraved manner, under § 13-703(F)(6). (Id. at 3-5.) Finding no statutory 20 mitigating factors and no nonstatutory factors sufficiently substantial to call for leniency, 21 the court imposed the death penalty. (Id. at 3-7.)

22 On direct appeal, the Arizona Supreme Court reversed Petitioner's conviction for 23 child abuse but affirmed Petitioner's other convictions and sentences. Styers, 177 Ariz. at 24 111, 117, 865 P.2d at 772, 778. Petitioner filed a motion for reconsideration in the Arizona
25 Supreme Court; it was denied on February 16, 1994. Petitioner unsuccessfully sought 26 certiorari review in the United States Supreme Court. Styers v. Arizona, 513 U.S. 855 (1994).

27 In September 1995, Petitioner filed a petition for post-conviction relief (PCR) in the trial court (PCR court) pursuant to Rule 32 of the Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure. (ROA-PCR 90.) The PCR court dismissed the petition. (ME 1/25/96.) Petitioner filed a petition for review in the Arizona Supreme Court in which he argued that the PCR court erroneously found his claims precluded. The Arizona Supreme Court then remanded the case to the PCR court for consideration of the original petition. The PCR court held an evidentiary hearing and denied the petition on the merits. (ME 10/20/97.) Petitioner filed another petition for review in the Arizona Supreme Court, and it was summarily denied on November 17, 1998. Petitioner filed his initial petition for writ of habeas corpus in this Court on December 16, 1998. (Dkt. 1.)
28

AEDPA STANDARD FOR RELIEF

Petitioner's habeas claims are governed by the applicable provisions of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (AEDPA). See Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S. 320, 336 (1997). Under the AEDPA, a petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief on any claim "adjudicated on the merits" by the state court unless that adjudication:

(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or

(2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The phrase "adjudicated on the merits" refers to a decision resolving a party's claim which is based on the substance of the claim rather than on a procedural or other non-substantive ground. Lambert v. Blodgett, 393 F.3d 943, 969 (9th Cir. 2004). The relevant state court decision is the last reasoned state decision regarding a claim. Barker v. Fleming, 423 F.3d 1085, 1091 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797, 803-04 (1991)); Insyxiengmay v. Morgan, 403 F.3d 657, 664 (9th Cir. 2005).

"The threshold question under AEDPA is whether [petitioner] seeks to apply a rule of law that was clearly established at the time his state-court conviction became final." Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 390 (2000). Therefore, to assess a claim under subsection (d)(1), the Court must first identify the "clearly established Federal law," if any, that

1 governs the sufficiency of the claims on habeas review. “Clearly established” federal law
2 consists of the holdings of the Supreme Court at the time the petitioner’s state court
3 conviction became final. Williams, 529 U.S. at 365; see Musladin v. Lamarque, 427 F.3d 4 653, 655 (9th Cir. 2005) (“AEDPA limits the source of clearly-established federal law to 5 Supreme Court cases”); Clark v. Murphy, 331 F.3d 1062, 1069 (9th Cir. 2003). Habeas relief
6 cannot be granted if the Supreme Court has not “broken sufficient legal ground” on a 7 constitutional principle advanced by a petitioner, even if lower federal courts have decided 8 the issue. Williams, 529 U.S. at 381. Nevertheless, while only Supreme Court authority is 9 binding, circuit court precedent may be of “persuasive value” in determining what law is 10 clearly established and whether a state court applied that law unreasonably. Musladin, 427 11 F.3d at 655 (collecting cases); see Clark, 331 F.3d at 1069.

12 The Supreme Court has provided guidance in applying each prong of § 2254(d)(1).
13 The Court has explained that a state court decision is “contrary to” the Supreme Court’s 14 clearly established precedents if the decision applies a rule that contradicts the governing 15 law set forth in those precedents, thereby reaching a conclusion opposite to that reached 16 by the Supreme Court on a matter of law, or if it confronts a set of facts that is materially 17 indistinguishable from a decision of the Supreme Court but reaches a different result.
18 Williams, 529 U.S. at 405-06; see Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 8 (2002) (per curiam). In 19 characterizing the claims subject to analysis under the “contrary to” prong, the Court has 20 observed that “a run-of-the-mill state-court decision applying the correct legal rule to the 21 facts of the prisoner’s case would not fit comfortably within § 2254(d)(1)’s ‘contrary to’
22 clause.” Williams, 529 U.S. at 406; see Lambert, 393 F.3d at 974.

23 Under the “unreasonable application” prong of § 2254(d)(1), a federal habeas court 24 may grant relief where a state court “identifies the correct governing legal rule from [the 25 Supreme] Court’s cases but unreasonably applies it to the facts of the particular . . . case” 26 or “unreasonably extends a legal principle from [Supreme Court] precedent to a new 27 context where it should not apply or unreasonably refuses to extend that principle to a new 28 context where it should apply.” Williams, 529 U.S. at 407. In order for a federal court to 1 find a state court's application of Supreme Court precedent "unreasonable" under § 2 2254(d)(1), the petitioner must show that the state court's decision was not merely 3 incorrect or erroneous, but "objectively unreasonable." Id. at 409; Woodford v. Visciotti, 4 537 U.S. 19, 25 (2002) (per curiam).

5 Under the standard set forth in § 2254(d)(2), habeas relief is available only if the 6 state court decision was based upon an unreasonable determination of the facts. Miller-El 7 v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231, 240, 125 S. Ct. 2317, 2325 (2005) (Miller-El II). A state court 8 decision "based on a factual determination will not be overturned on factual grounds 9 unless objectively unreasonable in light of the evidence presented in the state-court 10 proceeding." Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 340 (2003) (Miller-El I); see Taylor v.
11 Maddox, 366 F.3d 992, 999 (9th Cir. 2004). In considering a challenge under 2254(d)(2), 12 state court factual determinations are presumed to be correct, and a petitioner bears the 13 "burden of rebutting this presumption by clear and convincing evidence." 28 U.S.C. § 14 2254(e)(1); Miller-El II, 545 U.S. at 240, 125 S. Ct. at 2325. However, it is only the state 15 court's factual findings, not its ultimate decision, that are subject to 2254(e)(1)'s 16 presumption of correctness. Miller-El I, 537 U.S. at 341-42. ("The clear and convincing 17 evidence standard is found in § 2254(e)(1), but that subsection pertains only to state-court 18 determinations of factual issues, rather than decisions.").

19 As the Ninth Circuit has noted, application of the foregoing standards presents 20 difficulties when the state court decided the merits of a claim without providing its 21 rationale. See Himes v. Thompson, 336 F.3d 848, 853 (9th Cir. 2003); Pirtle v. Morgan, 313 22 F.3d 1160, 1167 (9th Cir. 2002); Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 981-82 (9th Cir. 2000). In 23 those circumstances, a federal court independently reviews the record to assess whether 24 the state court decision was objectively unreasonable under controlling federal law.
25 Himes, 336 F.3d at 853; Pirtle, 313 F.3d at 1167. Although the record is reviewed 26 independently, a federal court nevertheless defers to the state court's ultimate decision.
27 Pirtle, 313 F.3d at 1167 (citing Delgado, 223 F.3d at 981-82); see also Himes, 336 F.3d at 853.

Only when a state court did not decide the merits of a properly raised claim will the claim be reviewed de novo, because in that circumstance “there is no state court decision on [the] issue to which to accord deference.” Pirtle, 313 F.3d at 1167; see also Menendez v. Terhune, 422 F.3d 1012, 1025-26 (9th Cir. 2005); Nulph v. Cook, 333 F.3d 1052, 1056-57 (9th Cir. 2003).

DISCUSSION

CLAIM THREE:

Petitioner alleges that the Arizona courts violated his due process rights and his right to be free from double jeopardy by “double-counting” the age of the murder victim as more than one aggravating circumstance. Specifically, Petitioner contends that the trial court improperly double-counted the victim’s age for purposes of aggravating Petitioner’s sentence when it determined that the murder was committed in an especially heinous and depraved manner, pursuant to A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(6), and also applied § 13-703(F)(9), which establishes the age of the victim (if under fifteen or over seventy) as an aggravating factor. This claim is without merit.

On direct appeal, Petitioner argued that the victim’s age may constitute only one aggravating circumstance. (Opening Br. at 15-16; Reply Br. at 12-13). The Arizona Supreme Court rejected the double-counting argument, holding that the trial court’s application of the aggravating factors was constitutionally valid:

Christopher was four years old and defendant was 42. Defendant claims that the trial court gave the victim’s age double weight by using the age to support two aggravating factors – A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(6) and (F)(9). The trial court did rely, in part, on Christopher’s young age in finding that he was a helpless victim for purposes of the (F)(6) factor. The use of one fact to establish two aggravating circumstances is proper, provided the court, in balancing the aggravating and mitigating factors, does not weigh the young age of the victim twice. It is but one fact; therefore, it cannot be weighed twice even though it satisfies two separate aggravating factors.

The defendant did not raise the “double-counting” point in the trial court. The trial court’s special verdict did not expressly recite that it weighed the victim’s young age only once. However, trial judges “are presumed to know the law and to apply it in making their decisions.” Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639, 653, 110 S.Ct. 3047, 3057, 111 L.Ed.2d 511 (1990); State v. Forteson, 8 Ariz.App. 468, 473, 447 P.2d 560, 565 (1968) (“On appeal it is our

1 duty to presume that the trial court acted properly.”). Therefore, we presume 2 the trial court made proper use of the victim’s age and we find no error. In conducting our independent review and weighing of aggravating and mitigating circumstances, we will consider the age of the victim only once.

3 Styers, 177 Ariz. at 116, 865 P.2d at 777.

4 This ruling is neither contrary to nor an unreasonable application of clearly 5 established federal law. First, the United States Supreme has noted that, “We have never 6 held that aggravating factors could be so duplicative as to render them constitutionally 7 invalid.” Jones v. United States, 527 U.S. 373, 398 (1999). Next, as the Arizona Supreme 8 Court correctly noted, judges are presumed to know and follow the law, “even when they 9 fail to so indicate.” Jeffers v. Lewis, 38 F.3d 411, 415 (9th Cir. 1994). Therefore, the trial 10 court is presumed to have applied the law correctly and weighed the victim’s age only once 11 when sentencing Petitioner. Nothing in the record rebuts that presumption. Furthermore, 12 the Arizona Supreme Court has noted that it was not inappropriate for the trial court to use 13 the child’s age as a factor in finding helplessness pursuant to § 13-703(F)(6). See State v.
14 Gallegos, 178 Ariz. 1, 15, 870 P.2d 1097, 1111 (1994) (impermissible double-counting did not 15 occur when the court applied both the (F)(9) and (F)(6) factors even though the 16 helplessness finding was based upon the age and size of the eight-year-old victim). The 17 trial court considered other circumstances in finding that the victim was helpless, including 18 the fact that the child trusted and depended upon Petitioner as a parental figure. (ROA-19 PCR at 5-6.) Finally, the supreme court explicitly stated that in its independent review of 20 Petitioner’s death sentence, it weighed the victim’s age only once, Styers, 177 Ariz. at 116, 21 865 P.2d at 777. See Clemons v. Mississippi, 494 U.S. 738, 750, 754 (1990) (finding that 22 appellate courts are constitutionally permitted to affirm a death sentence based on 23 independent re-weighing despite sentencing error); Wainwright v. Goode, 464 U.S. 78, 86-24 87 (1983) (finding no constitutional violation because, regardless of what the sentencing 25 judge considered, the state supreme court did not consider anything improper in 26 conducting its independent reweighing of aggravation and mitigation).

27 For the reasons set forth above, Petitioner is not entitled to relief on Claim Three.
28

1 CLAIM FOUR:

2 Petitioner alleges that the evidence was not sufficient to make the requisite finding 3 under Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 797 (1982), that he actually killed, attempted to kill, 4 or intended to kill Christopher Milke. Therefore, according to Petitioner, imposition of the 5 death penalty violates his Eighth Amendment rights.

6 In Enmund, the Supreme Court held that a felony murder defendant is eligible for the 7 death penalty only if he actually killed, attempted to kill, or intended to kill the victim. 458
8 U.S. at 797. In Tison, the Court expanded Enmund's rule so that a felony murder defendant 9 could be sentenced to death if the defendant was a major participant in the underlying 10 felony and acted with reckless indifference to human life. 481 U.S. at 157-58; see also 11 Greenawalt v. Ricketts, 943 F.2d 1020, 1029 (9th Cir. 1991) (Enmund satisfied when 12 defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death and was an active participant in the 13 felonies).

14 A state court's finding that Enmund/Tison is satisfied is sufficient if "after viewing 15 the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact" could 16 have made the finding beyond a reasonable doubt. Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307, 319 17 (1979). On habeas review, the provisions of the AEDPA demand an additional level of 18 deference: a state court's findings regarding Enmund/Tison are factual determinations 19 which are presumed correct and which Petitioner "bears the heavy burden of overcoming."
20 Cabana v. Bullock, 474 U.S. 376, 377-78 (1986), abrogated on other grounds by Pope v.
21 Illinois, 481 U.S. 497, 503 n.7 (1987); see 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1) (petitioner bears the burden 22 of overcoming by "clear and convincing evidence" the presumption of correctness 23 applicable to a state court's factual determinations); Revilla v. Gibson, 283 F.3d 1203, 1211 24 (10th Cir. 2002) (same).

25 The jury convicted Petitioner of first-degree murder, under both premeditation and 26 felony-murder theories, and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder. (ROA-PCR 76.) In 27 its special verdict, the trial court found "beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant 28

1 killed and intended to kill the victim herein.” (Id. at 2.)

2 Petitioner presented this claim on direct appeal. (Opening Br. at 17-20.) The Arizona 3 Supreme Court rejected the argument that the trial court’s findings were not supported by 4 sufficient evidence:

5 Defendant owned the tennis shoes found in the parking lot near the 6 Sears store and which had a tread pattern similar to the partial prints found 7 in the wash near the body. Defendant purchased two .22 caliber weapons 8 shortly before the murder, one of which was found in Scott’s apartment and 9 could have fired the bullets found in the victim’s head. Defendant 10 possessed bullets like those found along the road near the wash. Defendant 11 participated in the two day charade at Metrocenter where he told police that 12 Christopher had disappeared from a restroom. During that time, he did not, 13 for several hours, even mention Scott’s name, or that Scott had been with 14 defendant and Christopher that day. Defendant now claims that Scott killed 15 Christopher; yet defendant participated in the phantom search with the 16 police without mentioning Scott.

17 Styers, 177 Ariz. at 114, 865 P.2d at 775. The court further explained that, “The jury’s 18 finding of conspiracy and premeditated murder satisfies Enmund. The trial court’s finding 19 merely confirms it.” Id.

20 Petitioner argues that the circumstantial evidence presented at trial was inadequate 21 to support a determination that Petitioner actually shot Christopher Milke or intended that 22 the child would be killed. This argument is without merit.

23 As noted, the state courts made factual determinations regarding Petitioner’s 24 participation in the murder. Petitioner’s challenge to these findings is based solely on his 25 own self-serving trial testimony to the effect that co-defendant Scott, acting on his own 26 initiative and without any prior knowledge on Petitioner’s part, shot the child and then 27 turned the gun on Petitioner; according to Petitioner, Scott then threatened to harm Debra 28 Milke and Petitioner’s daughter if Petitioner did not cooperate with Scott in the subsequent missing-child ruse. (See RT 10/29/90 at 63, 69-71.) The jury, the trial court, and the Arizona Supreme Court rejected this scenario, and it is not supported by the remainder of the evidence adduced at trial, including that summarized by the Arizona Supreme Court, as well as the testimony of witnesses who reported that Petitioner appeared calm and in good spirits while carrying out the sham search for Christopher Milke at the Metrocenter

1 Mall. (See RT 10/16/90 at 59, 60, 129.) During the course of the lengthy search, Petitioner 2 was away from Scott's presence, was frequently in the company of police officers, and was 3 allowed to make private phone calls, yet he failed to inform anyone of Christopher Milke's
 4 fate. (See, e.g., 10/29/90 at 125, 128.)

5 Viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, a rational 6 factfinder could easily find sufficient evidence showing that Petitioner was a major 7 participant in the underlying felonies and that he acted with reckless indifference to human 8 life under Enmund/Tison. Petitioner has not presented clear and convincing evidence to 9 overcome the presumption of correctness which attaches to the factual determinations 10 made by the jury, the trial court, and the Arizona Supreme Court. Therefore, Petitioner is 11 not entitled to relief on Claim Four.

12 CLAIM 5:

13 Petitioner alleges that the application of Arizona's "especially heinous or depraved" 14 aggravating factor was arbitrary in violation of the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.
 15 Specifically, Petitioner challenges the determination that the senselessness of the murder 16 and the helplessness of the victim were sufficient to support a finding that the murder of 17 Christopher Milke was committed in an especially heinous or depraved manner pursuant 18 to A.R.S. § 13-703(F)(6).

19 On direct appeal, the Arizona Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's application 20 of the heinous or depraved aggravating factor. The supreme court first made reference to 21 its discussion in co-defendant Milke's case of the rules applicable to the heinous or 22 depraved factor. Styers, 177 Ariz. at 115, 865 P.2d at 776.<sup>3</sup> The court then addressed the

24 <sup>3</sup> In Milke, the Arizona Supreme Court acknowledged that the § 13-703(F)(6) 25 aggravating factor is facially vague but correctly noted that the narrowing construction the 26 court has applied to the factor meets constitutional requirements. State v. Milke, 177 Ariz.
 27 118, 125, 865 P.2d 779, 786 (1993) (citing Richmond v. Lewis, 506 U.S. 40, 47 (1992); Walton, 28 497 U.S. at 654). This narrowing construction, adopted in State v. Gretzler, 135 Ariz. 42, 52, 659 P.2d 1, 11 (1983), identified the following factors which may lead to a finding of 1 application of the factor to Petitioner's offense:

2 certainly the victim was helpless and the killing was senseless. The victim, 3 a four-year-old child, trusted defendant, his baby-sitter. Defendant used this 4 trust and played upon the child's favorite things – Santa Claus and hunting 5 for snakes – to lure him into a desolate desert wash so he could execute him.
6 Christopher was dependent upon defendant for care while he was away from 7 his mother. He was helpless when defendant and Scott took him and killed 8 him.

9 Although there was no legal “parent/child” relationship, defendant 10 and victim did share a special relationship in that defendant was the child's 11 full-time caregiver for several months before he killed him. This fact 12 illustrates the depravity of defendant and makes the crime even more 13 senseless and the victim especially helpless as to this defendant.

14 The circumstances of this crime are indeed shocking, and they 15 separate this crime from the “norm” of first degree murders. The evidence 16 supports the especially heinous and depraved aggravating circumstance.

17 Id. at 115-16, 865 P.2d at 776-77.

18 Petitioner's challenge to this ruling is without merit. While the Arizona Supreme 19 Court has observed that ordinarily a finding of helplessness and senselessness is not 20 sufficient to support the heinous or depraved factor, it has never held that such a finding 21 cannot satisfy the factor. See, e.g., State v. Smith, 146 Ariz. 491, 503, 707 P.2d 289, 301 22 (1985) (senselessness and helplessness, without other factors, “will [not] ordinarily be 23 determinative on the question of heinousness or depravity”); State v. Gretzler, 135 Ariz.
24 42, 52-53, 659 P.2d 1, 11-12 (1983) (“The mere existence of senselessness or helplessness 25 in the victim, in isolation, need not always lead to a holding that the crime is heinous or 26 depraved, however.”). Indeed, in Petitioner's case, and those of co-defendants Milke and 27 Scott, the Arizona Supreme Court applied its own precedent to determine that the 28 heinousness or depravity factor had been proved based solely on the child's helplessness and the senselessness of the murder. Milke, 177 Ariz. at 125, 865 P.2d at 786; State v.
Scott, 177 Ariz. 131, 143, 865 P.2d 792, 804 (1993). Moreover, contrary to Petitioner's heinousness or depravity: (1) the apparent relishing of the murder by the killer; (2) the infliction of gratuitous violence on the victim; (3) the needless mutilation of the victim; (4) the senselessness of the crime; and (5) the helplessness of the victim. These factors are non-exclusive. State v. Mata, 185 Ariz. 319, 338, 916 P.2d 1035, 1054 (1996).

1 assertion, these cases are not the only instances in which the Arizona Supreme Court has 2 held that helplessness and senselessness alone sufficed for a finding that a murder was 3 heinous or depraved under § 13-703(F)(6). See State v. Lopez, 174 Ariz. 131, 144, 847 P.2d 4 1078, 1091 (1992) (holding that, although cruelty was also present, the heinous and 5 depraved factor was satisfied by the senseless beating death of a helpless infant).

6 Petitioner also challenges the use of helplessness in support of the (F)(6) factor on 7 the grounds that the child's state of helplessness was a function of his age rather than any 8 action taken by Petitioner. The Court disagrees. As the Arizona Supreme Court observed, 9 Christopher Milke was helpless in part because he was in the custody of an adult whom 10 he trusted and who was serving as his care-giver.

11 The United States Supreme Court has explained that "federal habeas review of a 12 state court's application of a constitutionally narrowed aggravating circumstance is limited, 13 at most, to determining whether the state court's finding was so arbitrary or capricious as 14 to constitute an independent due process or Eighth Amendment violation." Lewis v.
15 Jeffers, 497 U.S. 764, 780 (1990). "A state court's finding of an aggravating circumstance 16 in a particular case . . . is arbitrary or capricious if and only if no reasonable sentencer could 17 have so concluded." Id. at 783. This Court concludes that a reasonable sentencer could 18 have determined that Petitioner's offense was heinous and depraved based upon its 19 senselessness and the helplessness of the victim; application of the factor was not, 20 therefore, arbitrary and capricious. Petitioner is not entitled to relief on Claim Five.

21 CLAIM SEVEN:

22 Petitioner alleges that trial counsel performed ineffectively during the guilt phase 23 of his trial in violation of his right to effective assistance of counsel under the Sixth and 24 Fourteenth Amendments. Petitioner contends that counsel was ineffective in the following 25 respects: he failed to challenge the jury panel for cause and move for a continuance; he did 26 not object when the jury asked for and was provided a dictionary during deliberations; he 27 failed to object to prejudicial questions asked by the prosecution; he failed to object to the 28 prosecutor's closing argument; and he failed to object to the trial court's consideration of 1 the presentence report.

2 Clearly established federal law

3 As previously discussed, when a state court has addressed the merits of a 4 petitioner's claim of federal constitutional error, a federal court may grant habeas relief only 5 if the state court's decision was "contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, 6 clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States."
 7 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1); see Yarborough v. Gentry, 540 U.S. 1, 4 (2003) (per curiam);
 8 Woodford v. Visciotti, 537 U.S. at 21. For a claim alleging ineffective assistance of counsel 9 ("IAC"), the applicable law is set forth in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984).

 11 To prevail under Strickland's two-pronged standard, a petitioner must show that 12 counsel's representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness and that the 13 deficiency prejudiced the defense. 466 U.S. at 687-88. The inquiry under Strickland is 14 highly deferential, and "every effort [must] be made to eliminate the distorting effects of 15 hindsight, to reconstruct the circumstances of counsel's challenged conduct, and to 16 evaluate the conduct from counsel's perspective at the time." Id. at 689. To prove 17 deficient performance, a defendant must also overcome "the presumption that, under the 18 circumstances, the challenged action might be considered sound trial strategy." Id.; see 19 Dows v. Wood, 211 F.3d 480, 486-487 (9th Cir. 2000). To demonstrate prejudice, a petitioner 20 "must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional 21 errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability 22 is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome." Id. at 694.

23 Under the AEDPA, the state court's decision is subject to another level of 24 deference. Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. 685, 698-99 (2002). In order to merit habeas relief a 25 petitioner must make the additional showing that the state court's determination that 26 counsel was not ineffective constituted an unreasonable application of Strickland. 28 27 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1).

28 Analysis

Petitioner presented these allegations of ineffective assistance in his PCR petition. After an evidentiary hearing, the PCR court found that “Petitioner has failed to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, both prongs of ineffective assistance of counsel as to all claims raised.” (ME 10/20/97 at 2.) Because the PCR court did not provide a rationale for its decision, this Court has independently reviewed the record and determined, for the reasons set forth below, that the state court’s decision was objectively reasonable under Strickland. Himes, 336 F.3d at 853; Pirtle, 313 F.3d at 1167.

(1) Failure to challenge the jury panel and move for a continuance

Citing extensive pretrial publicity regarding the murder of Christopher Milke, including media coverage of the recent trial and conviction of co-defendant Debra Milke, Petitioner alleges that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to move to strike the jury panel for cause and continue the trial.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> In his merits brief, Petitioner raises several new allegations of IAC. He now contends that counsel was ineffective for failing to move for a change of venue, failing to undertake individual voir dire, failing to challenge juror Haley for cause based on the juror’s exposure to pretrial publicity, and failing to object to the striking of juror Driscoll, who was dismissed after stating that she could not vote to convict a defendant if doing so would expose him to the death penalty. Petitioner presented none of these claims in either his amended habeas petition or his PCR petition, both of which raised only the issue of IAC based on counsel’s failure to move to strike the panel. (Dkt. 64 at 122; ROA-PCR 90 at 12-13.)

Petitioner contends that it was unnecessary to raise in his amended petition each instance of alleged IAC. (Dkt. 101 at 23.) The Court disagrees. Because Petitioner has failed to raise the issues, as required by Rule 2(c) of the Rules Governing Habeas Cases, they are not properly before this Court. See Mayle v. Felix, 545 U.S. 644, ___, 125 S. Ct. 2562, 2573 (2005) (citing Rule 2(c), which instructs Petitioner to “specify all grounds of relief available” and to “state the facts supporting each ground”); Cacoperdo v. Demosthenes, 37 F.3d 504, 507 (9th Cir. 1994) (indicating that the only habeas claims a district court will consider are those contained in the habeas petition itself or those raised in an amended petition or statement of additional claims). Moreover, allegations of IAC constitute separate claims, each of which must be exhausted in state court. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 690 (stating that a petitioner making an IAC claim must identify the particular

1        Background:

2        Jury selection began with a panel of eighty venire members. (See Dkt. 90, Ex. A.) 3        Under questioning by the court, forty-nine of these prospective jurors indicated that they 4        had heard of the case. (See RT 10/15/90.) Upon further query, twenty-five panel members
 5        indicated that they had formed a fixed opinion of Petitioner's guilt; the court excused each 6        of these members. (Id.) Seven of the sixteen members who ultimately served as jurors or 7        alternates had heard of the case. (Id.) At the conclusion of jury selection, defense counsel 8        put the following comments on the record:

9            I discussed with Mr. Levy [the prosecutor], my client, the question of, the 10          issue of venue, and just so that there's no problems in the future, I 11          discussed the possibility of requesting a change of venue due to the recent 12          decision in Debra Milke's case with Mr. Styers. Mr. Styers wishes to 13          proceed with trial.

14          Also, in speaking with or researching, doing some research with other 15          areas of the state, it appears that Debra Milke's case got significant publicity 16          in other areas of the state. We would be – we wouldn't be assured of getting 17          any fairer jury than we have already.

18          (Id. at 83-84.) After noting that all of the jurors selected had indicated that they could set 19          aside whatever they had heard and judge the case solely on the merits, the court reiterated 20          its understanding that counsel had decided not to move for a change of venue based on 21          Petitioner's "decision to go forward with trial." (Id. at 84.) Counsel indicated that the court
 22          was correct. (Id.)

23          In its initial order rejecting this IAC claim, the PCR court found that the "jury voir 24          dire resulted in empaneling a fair and impartial jury." (ME 1/25/96.) Subsequently, during 25          an evidentiary hearing before the PCR court, counsel testified that he did not object to the

26          acts or omissions of counsel that are alleged to have been the result of unreasonable 27          professional judgment). The Ninth Circuit has confirmed that a generic IAC claim is 28          insufficient to exhaust particular IAC allegations. See Moormann v. Schriro, 426 F.3d 1044, 1056 (9th Cir. 2005); Carriger v. Lewis, 971 F.2d 329, 333-34 (9th Cir. 1992) (en banc).
 Therefore, specific claims of IAC that were not presented in state court are not properly exhausted; rather, they are technically exhausted but procedurally defaulted and therefore unavailable for federal habeas review.

1 panel in part because he was aware that other attorneys had made such motions and they 2 had been denied. (RT 10/17/97 at 42.) The court again denied Petitioner's IAC claims. (ME 3 10/20/97.)

4 Discussion:

5 The "prerequisite" for Petitioner's IAC claim is a demonstration of prejudicial pretrial 6 publicity such that, if counsel had moved to strike the panel, there was a reasonable 7 probability that trial court would have granted the motion. Turner v. Calderon, 281 F.3d 8 851, 865 (9th Cir. 2002); see also Baldwin v. Johnson, 152 F.3d 1304, 1314 (11th Cir. 1998); 9 Sharp v. Johnson, 107 F.3d 282, 286-87 (5th Cir. 1997). As discussed below, because 10 Petitioner has failed to show the existence of prejudicial pretrial publicity, he is unable to 11 demonstrate that the trial court would likely have granted a motion to strike the panel and 12 continue the trial, and he cannot, therefore, satisfy the Strickland standard.

13 A criminal defendant facing trial by jury is entitled to be tried by "a panel of 14 impartial, 'indifferent' jurors." Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 722 (1961). To ensure this right, 15 an Arizona trial court can strike a panel due to exposure to pretrial publicity if the 16 defendant shows that the jurors "have formed preconceived notions concerning the 17 defendant's guilt and that they cannot lay those notions aside."<sup>5</sup> State v. Walton, 159 Ariz.

18 _____
 19 <sup>5</sup> Rule 18.4(a) of the Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure provides that either 20 party may challenge the entire jury panel on the ground that "in its selection there has 21 been a material departure from the requirements of law." In applying this Rule, Arizona 22 courts have explained that while an accused has a constitutional right to be tried by a fair 23 and impartial jury, he is not entitled to be tried by any particular jury. State v. Greenawalt, 24 128 Ariz. 150, 167, 624 P.2d 828, 845 (1981). Therefore, a party who challenges the jury panel has the burden of demonstrating either that the jury was unlawfully empaneled or that the jurors could not be fair and impartial. Id.

25 In determining the merits of a challenge to the panel such as that now advocated by 26 Petitioner – i.e., alleging that a fair and impartial jury cannot be empaneled due to harmful 27 pretrial publicity – the Court employs the standards for assessing prejudice which are 28 applied in motions seeking a change of venue. Cf. State v. Walton, 159 Ariz. 571, 580, 769
 P.2d 1017, 1026 (1989). For that reason, even if the Court were to consider Petitioner's unexhausted claim that counsel was ineffective for failure to move for a change of venue,

1 571, 580, 769 P.2d 1017, 1026 (1989) (quoting State v. Chaney, 141 Ariz. 295, 302, 686 P.2d
2 1265, 1272 (1984)). A defendant must show that the jury was actually prejudiced by pretrial 3 publicity, or that the publicity was so outrageous that prejudice could be assumed. Id.

4 There is a presumption of prejudice based upon pretrial publicity when a defendant 5 can show that jurors were exposed to publicity “so outrageous that it promise[d] to turn 6 the trial into a mockery of justice or a mere formality.” State v. Bible, 175 Ariz. 549, 563, 858
7 P.2d 1152, 1166 (1993); see Chaney, 141 Ariz. at 302, 686 P.2d at 1272 (prejudice is presumed 8 where pretrial publicity was so extensive and pervasive that it created a “carnival 9 atmosphere”). Pretrial publicity meets this threshold, however, only when it is “so unfair, 10 so prejudicial, and so pervasive that we cannot give any credibility to the jurors’ answers
11 during voir dire affirming their ability to decide the case fairly.” Bible, 175 Ariz. at 565, 858 12 P.2d at 1168. Where prejudice is not presumed, a defendant bears the burden of proving 13 that pretrial publicity probably deprived him of a fair trial. Id. at 566, 858 P.2d at 1169. The 14 focus is on whether the potential jurors “‘could not judge impartially the guilt of the 15 defendant.’” Id. (quoting Patton v. Yount, 467 U.S. 1025, 1035 (1984)); see Chaney, 141 16 Ariz. at 302, 686 P.2d at 1272 (to prove actual prejudice a defendant “must show that the 17 jurors have formed preconceived notions concerning the defendant’s guilt and that they 18 cannot lay those notions aside”). In judging the impact of pretrial publicity on a trial, “the 19 relevant inquiry is the effect of the publicity on a juror’s objectivity, not the mere fact of 20 publicity.” Id.

21 The Court finds that Petitioner has not met his burden of showing either form of 22 prejudice. The Arizona Supreme Court has consistently emphasized that the burden of 23 demonstrating presumed prejudice is “extremely heavy” and that “courts rarely presume 24 prejudice due to outrageous pretrial publicity.” Bible, 175 Ariz. at 564, 858 P.2d at 1167; see
25 also State v. Stokley, 182 Ariz. 505, 513-14, 898 P.2d 454, 462-63 (1995); State v. Jones, 197
26 Ariz. 290, 307, 4 P.3d 345, 362 (2000); State v. Bolton, 182 Ariz. 290, 300, 896 P.2d 830, 840

27 _____
28 the same result would obtain and the Court would find the claim meritless.

1 (1995); State v. LaGrand, 153 Ariz. 21, 34, 734 P.2d 563, 576 (1987); State v. Greenawalt, 128
2 Ariz. 150, 162-63, 624 P.2d 828, 840-41 (1981). In none of these cases, nor in any case cited
3 by Petitioner, did the Arizona Supreme Court find presumptive prejudice due to pretrial 4 publicity.

5       Attempting to demonstrate presumed prejudice, Petitioner notes that twenty-four 6 newspaper articles about the case were published in December 1989, following Christopher 7 Milke's murder, and another thirty-three articles appeared through October 15, 1990, the 8 day of jury selection in Petitioner's case. (Dkt. 101 at 37-38.) While Petitioner's case 9 generated substantial media interest, the nature of the coverage is distinguishable from the 10 publicity present in those "rare and unusual cases," Bible, 175 Ariz. at 565, 858 P.2d at 11 1168, in which courts have found presumptive prejudice. The media coverage of 12 Petitioner's case was neither as pervasive nor as inflammatory as that in the cases cited by 13 Petitioner, including Rideau v. Louisiana, 373 U.S. 723, 726-727 (1963), where the 14 defendant's detailed confession was broadcast on television three times and viewed by 15 potential jurors, and Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 333, 350-58 (1966), where massive and 16 sensational publicity led to outrageous trial conduct and a "carnival atmosphere." See 17 also Coleman v Kemp, 778 F.2d 1487, 1538-1543 (11th Cir. 1985) (prejudice presumed where 18 a small, close-knit community was exposed to pervasive, prejudicial, and inflammatory 19 press coverage). Instead, the coverage of Petitioner's case consisted largely of factual 20 reports and was no more egregious than the pretrial publicity that the Arizona Supreme 21 Court declined to hold presumptively prejudicial in the cases cited above.

22       Petitioner's remaining argument concerning prejudicial publicity relies on statistics 23 from the voir dire process, including the fact that sixty percent of the panel had heard of 24 the case and thirty percent of the original panel members were dismissed because they had 25 formed an opinion of Petitioner's guilt and could not be fair. (Dkt. 90 at 46-47.) These 26 figures do not support a finding of either presumed or actual prejudice.

27       In State v. Schmid, 107 Ariz. 191, 193, 484 P.2d 187, 189 (1971), for instance, all of the 28

1 empaneled jurors had prior knowledge of the case. Nevertheless, the Arizona Supreme 2 Court held that such a degree of familiarity with the case did not, standing alone, 3 demonstrate a level of prejudice sufficient to necessitate a change of venue. Id. Similarly, 4 in Bible “almost all” of the 167 prospective jurors had heard about the case, half had an 5 opinion about the defendant’s guilt, and twenty-three percent had an unqualified or fixed 6 opinion and were excused for cause. Bible, 175 Ariz. at 563, 566 n.6, 858 P.2d at 1166, 1169
7 n.6. All of the jurors selected to serve had read or heard of the case, and two of them had 8 a “qualified” opinion about the defendant’s guilt. Id. at 563, 858 P.2d at 1166. Despite 9 these statistics, the Arizona Supreme Court held that the defendant failed to show that he 10 was prejudiced by pretrial publicity to the extent that he was deprived of a fair trial. Id. at 11 566, 858 P.2d at 1169. The court noted that none of the jurors had an unqualified opinion 12 of the defendant’s guilt and all of the jurors indicated that they could set aside their 13 qualified opinions and decide the case based on evidence produced at trial. Id.

14 In Petitioner’s case, by contrast, only five of the twelve empaneled jurors had heard 15 of the case, none of them expressed even a qualified opinion as to Petitioner’s guilt, and 16 the trial court dismissed each of the potential jurors who indicated that he or she had 17 formed a fixed opinion.<sup>6</sup> Based upon these figures, and the voir dire process engaged in 18 by the trial court, Petitioner cannot show actual prejudice.

19
20 <sup>6</sup> Statistics in other cases support a finding that the panel in Petitioner’s case
21 was not prejudiced by pretrial publicity. For example, courts found that impartial juries 22 were impaneled in Murphy v. Florida, 421 U.S. 794, 803 (1975) (twenty of seventy-eight 23 panel members were excused because they had formed an opinion about defendant’s 24 guilt); Hale v. Gibson, 227 F.3d 1298, 1331-33 (10th Cir. 2000) (thirty-four of thirty-seven 25 jurors questioned had prior knowledge of the case, twelve had opinions regarding 26 defendant’s guilt, and six of the twelve were seated on the jury). In Irvin, by contrast, over 27 ninety percent of the 430 prospective jurors interviewed held some opinion as to guilt, 268 28 were dismissed for cause, and eight out of the twelve jurors actually seated stated they believed the defendant was guilty. Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717, 727. Based on these facts, and the obvious hostility towards the defendant revealed during voir dire, the Court determined the defendant could not have received a fair trial. Id.

1 Finally, as previously noted, the PCR court found that a fair and impartial jury had 2 been empaneled. This is a factual determination entitled to a presumption of correctness
 3 under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1). See Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412, 429 (1985); Thompson
 4 v. Keohane, 516 U.S. 99, 111 (1995); Hendricks v. Vasquez, 974 F.2d 1099, 1103 (9th Cir.
 5 1992). Petitioner has not rebutted this presumption with clear and convincing evidence.
 6 In addition, his IAC claim fails to take into account the impact of the PCR court's finding,
 7 the effect of which is to counter Petitioner's argument that he was prejudiced by counsel's 8 failure to challenge the panel; the court was not likely to grant such a motion when it 9 believed that the jury was fair and impartial.

10 For the reasons discussed above, the Court concludes that Petitioner is unable to 11 establish that counsel's performance was constitutionally ineffective. Because Petitioner 12 cannot show that a motion to dismiss the jury panel and continue the trial would have been 13 granted, he has not demonstrated prejudice under Strickland. Therefore, he is not entitled 14 to relief on his claim that counsel was ineffective for failing to make such a motion.

15 (2) Failure to object when the jury requested a dictionary

16 Petitioner alleges that counsel performed ineffectively by failing to object when the 17 jury asked for and was provided a dictionary during their deliberations.

18 On the morning of November 1, 1990, the jury retired to commence deliberations.
 19 Later that day, according to the court's minute entry, "the jury . . . asked for a dictionary.
 20 Counsel do not object and one is provided to them." (ME 11/1/90; Dkt. 90, Ex. B.) The jury 21 returned its verdict the following day.

22 Petitioner first challenged counsel's performance with respect to this incident in his 23 PCR petition. Respondents, conceding that the jurors' consideration of extraneous 24 information in the form of a dictionary potentially constituted reversible error, requested 25 a hearing. The PCR court, however, summarily dismissed the petition, finding that no 26 material issues of fact or law existed and that the claims were precluded. (ME 1/25/96; Dkt.
 27 90, Ex. C.) The Arizona Supreme Court remanded the matter, and an evidentiary hearing 28

1 was held on October 17, 1997.

2 At the hearing, Michael Sralik, the jury foreman, testified that he remembered a 3 dictionary being requested but did not remember if one was provided. (RT 10/17/97 at 6.)
4 Arthur Hanratty, an investigator for Maricopa County, testified that he interviewed the 5 other eleven jurors, none of whom could remember a dictionary being present in the jury 6 room; the jurors signed affidavits to that effect. (Id. at 9-10.) Kathy Jager, a bailiff during 7 Petitioner's trial, testified that a juror requested a dictionary and that she forwarded that 8 request to the judge; she did not see the jurors with a dictionary and "to [her] knowledge" 9 did not provide one. (Id. at 13-14.) Ann Schroder, a courtroom clerk, could not recall a 10 request for a dictionary, did not provide one to the jury, and did not recall anyone else 11 providing a dictionary. (Id. at 18.) Karen Jones-Jensen, another bailiff, testified that she 12 seemed to recall a request for a dictionary, possibly to look up the phrase "reasonable 13 doubt," but that she never provided the jury with a dictionary, that she never saw a 14 dictionary in the jury room, and that during her twelve years of service with the judge he 15 had never supplied a jury with a dictionary. (Id. at 23-25.) Defense counsel testified that 16 he remembered nothing about a request for a dictionary, but would have objected to one 17 being presented to the jury. (Id. at 47-48.)

18 After the hearing, the PCR court made a finding "that the jury did not utilize a 19 dictionary during their deliberations." (ME 10/20/97.) Petitioner contends, pursuant to 20 § 2254(d)(2), that this finding represented an unreasonable determination of the facts in 21 light of the evidence presented in state court. The Court disagrees.

22 The PCR court conducted a full and fair hearing and rendered a factual finding that 23 the jury did not use a dictionary. The PCR court's factual determination is entitled to a 24 presumption of correctness under § 2254(e)(1). Taylor v. Maddox, 366 F.3d at 1000; see, 25 e.g., McNair v. Campbell, 416 F.3d 1291, 1308-09 (11th Cir. 2005) (state court's finding 26 regarding innocuous effect of jury's reading of Bible passages during deliberations was 27 entitled to presumption of correctness). As described above, the court's conclusion was 28

1 supported by the evidence taken at the evidentiary hearing. Petitioner has pointed to no 2 witnesses or available testimony or other information that was not elicited in state court.
 3 Therefore, he has failed to overcome the presumption of correctness with clear and 4 convincing evidence.

5 Based upon the PCR court's un rebutted factual determination that the jury did not 6 use a dictionary, Petitioner cannot show that he was prejudiced by defense counsel's 7 failure to object to the jury's request. Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim.

8 (3) Failure to object to prejudicial questions presented by the prosecution to 9 witnesses at trial

10 Petitioner alleges that the prosecutor elicited improper character evidence from 11 several witnesses, including Maureen Sadeik, the stepmother of co-defendant Debra Milke; 12 John Chiulla and Patrick Murphy,<sup>7</sup> neighbors of Petitioner and Milke; Sandra Pickinpaugh, 13 Milke's sister; and Phillip Wolslagel, a state criminalist. Petitioner contends that counsel 14 performed ineffectively by failing to object to the prosecutor's questions. He further 15 alleges that counsel's performance was ineffective with respect to testimony elicited from 16 the criminalist regarding the contents of Petitioner's notebook.

17 At the evidentiary hearing before the PCR court, counsel testified that his overall 18 trial strategy was to object only when he had a strong basis to do so and when the 19 objectionable testimony was damaging to Petitioner's defense. (RT 10/17/97 at 40, 43.) He 20 further testified that he believed that the prosecutor was emotionally involved in the case
 21 and might be seen by the jury as badgering Petitioner. (Id. at 41.) In analyzing this claim, 22 the Court notes that counsel's trial strategy with respect to objections is entitled to

---

23 <sup>7</sup> In his merits brief, Petitioner alleges that counsel should have objected when 24 Mr. Murphy testified about an incident during which he heard Christopher Milke crying 25 and Petitioner told him he "beat his [Christopher's] ass" and that he "enjoyed it." (RT 26 10/22/90 at 58-59.) Petitioner did not raise this IAC allegation in his amended habeas 27 petition (see Dkt. 64 at 22-24) and therefore the Court cannot consider it. See supra at 15, 28 n. 4. The Court notes, however, that because the testimony was likely admissible under Arizona Rule of Evidence 404(b) to show motive or intent, counsel did not perform ineffectively by failing to object.

1 deference under Strickland. See, e.g., United States v. Mejia-Mesa, 153 F.3d 925, 931 (9th
 2 Cir. 1998) (“While [a defendant] may argue that it may have been better to make a certain 3 objection, a few missed objections alone, unless on a crucial point, do not rebut the strong 4 presumption that counsel’s actions (or failures to act) were pursuant to his litigation 5 strategy and within the wide range of reasonable performance.”).

6 Maureen Sadeik: Ms. Sadeik testified for the State. She described her observations
 7 of Petitioner’s conduct toward Debra Milke during a Thanksgiving dinner, when she noted 8 that Petitioner was “very solicitous” towards Milke and spoke to her using terms of 9 endearment such as “dear and “hon.” (RT 10/18/90 at 65.) At the conclusion of her 10 testimony, the prosecutor asked the following question: “Based upon your observations 11 of him and his interaction with Debra and his comments to her, how would you describe 12 the appearance of his attachment or his – how – you know whether he seemed to really like 13 Debra.” (Id. at 72.) Counsel did not object. (Id.) Ms. Sadeik answered that she believed 14 Petitioner “maybe was falling in love with” Milke. (Id.)

15 Petitioner contends that defense counsel should have objected to the prosecutor’s 16 question to Ms. Sadeik about Petitioner’s relationship with Milke because the question 17 was designed to elicit prejudicial evidence about Petitioner’s character and motive.
 18 Respondents counter that Ms. Sadeik’s testimony was admissible opinion evidence under 19 Rule 701 of the Arizona Rules of Evidence because it was rationally based upon the 20 witness’ personal perceptions and was helpful to the jury in that it provided evidence of 21 Petitioner’s motive in killing Milke’s child.<sup>8</sup> Because the Court concludes that the

22
 23 <sup>8</sup> Rule 701 provides:

24 If the witness is not testifying as an expert, the witness’ testimony in 25 the form of opinions or inferences is limited to those opinions or inferences 26 which are (a) rationally based on the perception of the witness and (b) 27 helpful to a clear understanding of the witness’ testimony or the 28 determination of a fact in issue.

1 testimony would likely have been ruled admissible under Rule 701, Petitioner's criticism of 2 counsel's performance is without merit.

3 Ms. Sadeik made specific, first-hand observations of Petitioner's behavior; clearly, 4 the inference that Petitioner may have been falling in love with Milke was supported by 5 those observations. Her opinion about Petitioner's feelings satisfied Rule 701(a) because 6 it was "predicated upon concrete facts within [her] own observation and recollection."
7 United States v. Skeet, 665 F.2d 983, 985 (9th Cir. 1982) ("[b]ecause it is sometimes difficult 8 to describe the mental or physical condition of a person, his character or reputation, the 9 emotions manifest by his acts . . . witnesses may relate their opinions or conclusions of 10 what they observed"); see also State v. Ayala, 178 Ariz. 385, 388, 873 P.2d 1307, 1310 11 (Ct.App. 1994); State v. Amaya-Ruiz, 166 Ariz. 152, 168, 800 P.2d 1260, 1276 (1990); United 12 States v. Beck, 418 F.3d 1008, 1015 (9th Cir. 2005). In addition, evidence concerning the 13 relationship between Petitioner and Milke was relevant to show Petitioner's motive for 14 participating in the conspiracy to murder Milke's child; i.e., that by carrying out the killing 15 he would gain favor with Milke and advance in her affections. Because the testimony was 16 admissible under the rules of evidence, counsel had no basis to object, and if he had 17 objected the objection would likely have been overruled.

18 Moreover, at the evidentiary hearing before the PCR court, counsel testified that he 19 chose not to object to Ms. Sadeik's testimony because he anticipated that Petitioner would 20 testify and that the topic of his feelings for Milke would be brought out by the prosecutor.
21 (RT 10/17/97 at 45.) Petitioner had also informed counsel that he did in fact have romantic 22 feelings for Milke. (Id.)

23 Respondents further contend that Petitioner was not prejudiced by counsel's 24 performance because, even if an objection had been made and sustained, there was not a 25 reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different. The Court 26 agrees. The challenged exchange resulted merely in a restatement of the testimony Ms.
27 Sadeik gave earlier when she described Petitioner's affectionate behavior toward Milke.
28 Moreover, on cross-examination defense counsel elicited testimony helpful to Petitioner.

1 Under his questioning, Ms. Sadeik reiterated her belief that the relationship between 2 Petitioner and Milke was “plutonic” [sic] (id. at 73); Ms. Sadeik also conceded that Milke 3 used other people (id. at 74) and testified that Petitioner took care of Christopher and 4 appeared to have a good relationship with the child (id. at 74, 76). See Beck, 418 F.3d at 5 1015 (noting that cross-examination serves to test the accuracy of the lay witness’s 6 testimony).

7 For the reasons stated above, counsel did not perform ineffectively with respect to 8 Ms. Sadeik’s testimony. Therefore, Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim.

9 John Chiulla: Petitioner contends that counsel performed ineffectively because he 10 failed to object when the prosecutor asked Mr. Chiulla if Petitioner was a “heavy drinker” 11 and Chiulla answered in the affirmative. (RT 10/22/90 at 27.) Petitioner argues that such 12 testimony was inadmissible under Arizona Rule of Evidence 404(a). Respondents contend 13 that counsel’s performance was not deficient because the testimony was not an attack on 14 Petitioner’s character but was admissible under Rule 402 to show that Chiulla was familiar 15 with Petitioner. Respondents also note that the prosecutor made no further mention of 16 Chiulla’s testimony regarding Petitioner’s drinking habits, so Petitioner was not prejudiced 17 by counsel’s failure to object. The Court concludes that, regardless of the admissibility 18 of the testimony, Petitioner has not shown that counsel’s failure to object was either 19 deficient or prejudicial. Counsel arguably made a tactical choice not to draw further 20 attention to testimony which, in the context of the entire trial, was brief and insignificant.
21 See State v. Noleen, 142 Ariz. 101, 106, 688 P.2d 993, 998 (1984).

22 Petitioner also alleges that counsel was ineffective because he failed to object to 23 testimony from Mr. Chiulla indicating that he did not believe Petitioner’s version of the 24 crime. On direct examination, Mr. Chiulla recounted a phone conversation with Petitioner 25 in which Petitioner detailed his version of the events surrounding the killing of Christopher 26 Milke and told Mr. Chiulla that co-defendant Scott was the shooter. (Id. at 33-37.) On 27 redirect examination, the prosecutor asked Chiulla if he had believed Petitioner’s story; 28 Chiulla responded, “Not really.” (Id. at 49.) Contrary to Petitioner’s argument, counsel did

1 object, on relevance grounds, but the objection was overruled. (Id.) Because counsel did 2 object to the prosecutor's question, his performance in this instance was not deficient.
3 Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim.

4 Sandra Pickinpaugh: Petitioner alleges that counsel performed ineffectively by 5 failing to object when Ms. Pickinpaugh, responding to the prosecutor's questions, testified 6 that she believed Petitioner would act violently in a negative situation and that his 7 personal circumstances with respect to Ms. Milke constituted a negative environment. (RT 8 10/22/90 at 53-54.) The testimony occurred during redirect examination. As Respondents 9 correctly note, this line of inquiry developed during defense counsel's cross-examination 10 of Ms. Pickinpaugh (RT 10/22/90 at 47-48), and therefore counsel was not in a position to 11 object when the prosecutor revisited the issue. See State v. Soto-Fong, 187 Ariz. 186, 193, 12 928 P.2d 610, 617 (1996); State v. Woratzeck, 134 Ariz. 452, 454, 657 P.2d 865, 867 (1982).
13 The issue becomes, therefore, whether counsel performed ineffectively by eliciting the 14 testimony during cross-examination. See Boyde v. Brown, 404 F.3d 1159, 1174 (9th Cir.
15 2005).

16 On cross-examination by defense counsel, Ms. Pickinpaugh testified that in her view 17 Petitioner was a gullible individual who did favors for people; she even accepted counsel's 18 characterization of Petitioner as a kind of "Good Samaritan." (RT 10/22/90 at 47.) Counsel 19 next asked Ms. Pickinpaugh if Petitioner had ever acted violently as a favor for someone; 20 Ms. Pickinpaugh responded that in her recollection Petitioner had never done so. (Id.)
21 Counsel then inquired whether Petitioner reacted in a particular way when he was upset 22 or under pressure. (Id.) In response to this question, Ms. Pickinpaugh indicated that if 23 Petitioner was in a positive situation he would react in a positive manner but that if he was 24 in a negative situation he would react in a negative way, both toward himself and those 25 around him; he would blame himself but take it out on other people, and he would also 26 become depressed. (Id. at 48-49.) On redirect examination, the prosecutor pursued this line 27 of questioning, which produced Ms. Pickinpaugh's testimony that she believed Petitioner
28 could respond violently to a negative situation "[i]f he was pushed far enough." (Id. at 54.)

To withstand scrutiny under Strickland, “counsel’s representation must be only objectively reasonable, not flawless or to the highest degree of skill.” Dows v. Wood, 211 F.3d at 487 (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688-89). Tactical decisions made during trial, such as those Petitioner’s counsel made with respect to the questioning of Ms. Pickinpaugh, “are given great deference.” Id. For example, in Phyle v. Leapley, 66 F.3d 154, 159 (8th Cir. 1995), the Eighth Circuit rejected the habeas petitioner’s claim that trial counsel was ineffective based on his failure to object to testimony by the key prosecution witness regarding prior violent acts by the petitioner. Applying the “presumption that counsel’s conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance,” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689, the Court of Appeals emphasized that trial tactics with respect to the questioning of witnesses are entitled to special deference:

trial lawyers must take into account [broad, highly subjective factors] as they make repeated, instantaneous decisions whether to object to a question, whether to move to strike a damaging unresponsive answer, or whether to move for a mistrial when a witness has delivered an unexpected low blow. When we review such trial decisions, the ineffective assistance standard is high – they are “virtually unchallengeable” – in part because appellate judges cannot recreate from a cold transcript the courtroom dynamics that are an essential part of evaluating the effectiveness of counsel’s performance. See 2 Wayne R. LaFare & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 11.10, at 95 (1984).

Phyle, 66 F.3d at 159.

Applying the standard of deference mandated by Strickland, the Court finds that counsel was not ineffective in his handling of Ms. Pickinpaugh’s testimony on cross-examination. He attempted, with some success, to elicit positive testimony from a State witness. The fact that counsel’s tactics also elicited damaging testimony does not amount to constitutionally ineffective assistance of counsel. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689 (judicial scrutiny of counsel’s performance must avoid “second-guessing” because “it is all too easy for a court, examining counsel’s defense after it has proved unsuccessful, to conclude that a particular act or omission of counsel was unreasonable”). Therefore, Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim.

Phillip Wolsagel: Petitioner alleges that counsel’s performance was ineffective due

1 to his failure to object to information elicited during the testimony of Mr. Wolsagel, a 2 criminalist with the Phoenix Crime Lab. On direct examination by the prosecutor, Mr.
3 Wolsagel testified about an entry in notebook found in Petitioner's apartment. (RT 4 10/25/90 at 52-53.) The entry, which, according to a handwriting expert, was written by 5 Petitioner, referred to the price for a quantity of cyanide. (Id. at 53.) Upon questioning by 6 the prosecutor, Mr. Wolsagel testified that cyanide was a substance with many uses and 7 that he had heard of cases where it was used to poison humans. (Id.) Counsel did not 8 object to the prosecutor's question regarding the uses of cyanide; nor did he raise the 9 subject on cross-examination.

10 Petitioner contends that the testimony regarding cyanide was inadmissible as 11 irrelevant and overly prejudicial. Respondents contend that counsel's performance was 12 not deficient or prejudicial because the testimony regarding cyanide was admissible to 13 show premeditation. Without resolving the evidentiary issue regarding the testimony's 14 admissibility, the Court finds that counsel's failure to object did not constitute ineffective 15 assistance.

16 The primary focus of Mr. Wolsagel's testimony was the key forensic evidence 17 presented by the State, including ballistics and footprint evidence linking Petitioner to the 18 murder. Defense counsel cross-examined Mr. Wolsagel thoroughly and vigorously on 19 those topics. (RT 10/25/90 at 59-72.) Apart from the passing reference elicited during the 20 direct examination of Mr. Wolsagel, the State made no further reference to the cyanide 21 issue. Based upon these factors, counsel could have made a tactical decision not to object 22 to the testimony about Petitioner's notebook "because he did not wish to draw undue 23 attention to the testimony or because he felt the jury might think the defendant was trying 24 to conceal more than was actually revealed by the answers." Noleen, 142 Ariz. at 106, 688 25 P.2d at 998.

26 For the reasons stated above, the Court concludes that Petitioner has failed to 27 demonstrate that trial counsel's handling of witnesses constituted ineffective assistance 28 under Strickland. Therefore, Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim.

(4) Failure to object when the prosecutor introduced facts during closing argument that were not adduced at trial

Petitioner contends that counsel performed ineffectively by failing to object to or rebut several allegedly improper elements of the prosecutor's closing argument. In his amended petition, this claim took the form of an allegation that counsel was ineffective because he "failed to object to the State's improper argument . . . that the person who shot the victim was an accurate shot and co-defendant Roger Scott did not like pistols and could not hit the broad side of a barn." (Dkt. 64 at 24.) This was also the claim raised before the state court in Petitioner's PCR petition. (ROA-PCR 90 at 20.) However, in his brief on the merits, Petitioner fails to discuss this allegation. (Dkt. 90 at 83-91.) Instead, he sets forth a new IAC claim, contending that the counsel performed ineffectively by failing to object when the prosecutor engaged in misconduct by "cloak[ing] himself in the prestige of the government," urging the jury to sympathize with the victim, and unfairly attacking Petitioner's character. (Id. at 83-86.) Petitioner's failure to exhaust this claim in state court or present it in his habeas petition render it unavailable for habeas review. See supra at note 4.

With respect to the properly-exhausted IAC claim, challenging counsel's failure to object to the prosecutor's characterization of Scott as a poor shot, Respondents contend that Petitioner abandoned the claim by failing to address it in his brief on the merits. Without determining whether Petitioner has abandoned or waived the issue by failing to support it in his merits brief, the Court concludes that the claim does not entitle Petitioner to habeas relief. Two principles militate against a finding that Petitioner is entitled to relief on this claim. First, trial counsel, "including prosecutors in criminal cases, are given wide latitude in their closing arguments to the jury." State v. Comer, 165 Ariz. 413, 426, 799 P.2d 333, 346 (1990). Therefore, in making a closing argument counsel "may summarize the evidence, make submittals to the jury, urge the jury to draw reasonable inferences from the evidence, and suggest ultimate conclusions." Bible, 175 Ariz. at 602, 858 P.2d at 1205; see State v. Dumaine, 162 Ariz. 392, 402, 783 P.2d 1184, 1194 (1989) ("counsel may comment on

1 and argue all justifiable inferences which can reasonably be drawn from the evidence
2 adduced at trial”). Here, the prosecutor drew reasonable inferences from the testimony of 3 Scott’s mother to the effect that Scott was not familiar with handguns. (RT 10/18/90 at 117-4 18.) Second, reviewing courts “indulge a strong presumption that counsel’s conduct falls 5 within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance.” Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689.
6 Trial counsel may properly decide to “refrain from objecting during closing argument to all 7 but the most egregious misstatements by opposing counsel on the theory that the jury 8 may construe their objections to be a sign of desperation or hyper-technicality.” United 9 States v. Molina, 934 F.2d 1440, 1448 (9th Cir. 1991); see United States v. Necochea, 986 10 F.2d 1273, 1281 (9th Cir. 1993) (“Because many lawyers refrain from objecting during 11 opening statement and closing argument, absent egregious misstatements, the failure to 12 object during closing argument and opening statement is within the ‘wide range’ of 13 permissible professional legal conduct.”); Dubria v. Smith, 224 F.3d 995, 1003-04 (9th Cir.
14 2000) (counsel’s failure to object to closing argument in which prosecutor referred to 15 defendant as “the biggest liar you’ve ever encountered” and defendant’s story as a “piece 16 of garbage” did not constitute deficient performance).

17 Applying these principles, the court cannot find that counsel’s failure to object to 18 the prosecutor’s comments amounted to deficient performance. Counsel’s silence during 19 the prosecutor’s closing can reasonably be seen as both an acknowledgment of the wide 20 latitude afforded counsel in making their closing arguments as well as a tactical decision 21 to avoid appearing desperate or disruptive. In fact, at the evidentiary hearing before the 22 PCR court, counsel testified that his decision whether or nor to object was based on his 23 assessment of the jurors’ reactions to the prosecutor’s arguments. (RT 10/17/97 at 60.)

24 Supporting this interpretation is the fact that, while defense counsel did not raise 25 any objections during the prosecutor’s closing argument, he did respond to the 26 prosecutor’s characterization of the evidence concerning Scott’s facility with firearms. In 27 his closing argument, counsel, noting that Scott’s mother was the only source of 28

1 information concerning Scott's inexperience with handguns, directly attacked the 2 credibility of her testimony:

3 Now, whose testimony does the State rely on when they tell you 4 Roger Scott didn't like guns, he was afraid of guns, he didn't know how to use a gun? That is simply not true, ladies and gentlemen.

5 You heard testimony from one person in defense of Roger Scott, that 6 was his mother. And in evaluating the credibility of that lady, first of all, you know it's her son that's been accused of conspiracy to this. She's going to try and protect her son.

7 (RT 10/31/90 at 69.) Later in his closing argument, counsel recounted Petitioner's
8 testimony that Scott did in fact own guns and behaved irresponsibly with them. (Id. at 90.) 9 These aspects of defense counsel's argument reduced any prejudice from his failure to 10 object to the comments made by the prosecutor.

11 Complementing defense counsel's effort to counter the prosecutor's comments were 12 the cautionary instructions offered by the court to the jury. Prior to the closing arguments, 13 the court explained that "what counsel tells you is not evidence. The only evidence you're 14 to consider is the testimony of the witnesses and the exhibits. I'm sure counsel will not 15 intentionally misstate any item of evidence to you. In the final analysis, however, it's your 16 individual and collective memories of the evidence that counts." (RT 10/31/90 at 3.) 17 Following the parties' arguments, the court instructed the jury "not to be influenced by 18 sympathy or prejudice" (RT 11/1/90 at 4) and again explained that what the attorneys say 19 in their closing arguments is not evidence and that the jury "must find the facts from the 20 evidence in court" (id. at 5). These instructions sufficiently addressed any prejudice that 21 might have resulted from the prosecutor's closing arguments. See United States v. Mares, 22 940 F.2d 455, 461 (9th Cir. 1991).

23 Petitioner has failed to show that counsel's performance with respect to the 24 prosecutor's closing argument was either deficient or prejudicial. Therefore, he is not 25 entitled to relief on this claim.

26 (5) Failure to object to the trial court's consideration of the presentence report

27 Upon sentencing Petitioner, the trial court indicated that it had received and 28

1 reviewed a presentence report. (RT 12/14/90 at 3.) The report contained victim impact 2 information, including the recommendations of family members and a police officer that 3 Petitioner should receive the death sentence. (ROA-PCR 77.) Contending that the court's 4 review of such information violated his constitutional rights, Petitioner alleges that 5 counsel's failure to object to the introduction of the report constituted ineffective 6 assistance.

7 In Booth v. Maryland, 482 U.S. 496, 509 (1987), the Supreme Court held that the 8 introduction of a victim impact statement during the sentencing phase of a capital case 9 violated the Eighth Amendment. In Payne v. Tennessee, 501 U.S. 808, 827, 830 (1991), the 10 Supreme Court revisited Booth and overruled it in part, holding that the Eighth Amendment 11 does not erect a per se barrier to the admission of victim impact evidence but leaving intact
12 Booth's prohibition on the admissibility of characterizations and opinions from the victim's 13 family about the crime, the defendant, or the appropriate sentence to be imposed. Id. at 830 14 n.2.

15 Under Arizona law at the time of Petitioner's trial, the trial judge, rather than a jury, 16 determined the penalty in a capital case. A.R.S. § 13-703. As noted above, trial judges are 17 presumed to know and apply the law. Jeffers, 38 F.3d at 415. Therefore, "in the absence 18 of any evidence to the contrary, [the Court] must assume that the trial judge properly 19 applied the law and considered only the evidence he knew to be admissible." Gretzler v.
20 Stewart, 112 F.3d 992, 1009 (9th Cir. 1997); see also State v. Soto-Fong, 187 Ariz. at 209, 928
21 P.2d at 633; State v. Gulbrandson, 184 Ariz. 46, 66, 906 P.2d 579, 599 (1995); State v. Bolton, 22 182 Ariz. at 315-16, 896 P.2d at 855-56.

23 While the trial court reviewed the presentence report, there is no indication that the 24 court ignored applicable law and considered the sentencing requests contained in the 25 report when determining Petitioner's sentence. In the absence of such evidence, this 26 Court, in accordance with Walton and Gretzler, presumes that the sentencing judge did not 27 improperly consider the victims' opinions. Therefore, defense counsel's failure to object 28

1 to the presentence report did not constitute IAC pursuant to Strickland because counsel 2 was entitled to presume that the trial court would follow the law when passing sentence
3 and because Petitioner has not shown that he was prejudiced by the failure to object.
4 Petitioner is not entitled to relief on this claim.

5 Summary

6 For the reasons set forth above, this Court concludes that the PCR court did not 7 apply Strickland unreasonably when it denied Petitioner's IAC claims. Therefore, 8 Petitioner is not entitled to relief on Claim Seven.

9 Request for Evidentiary Hearing

10 In his amended habeas petition, Petitioner made a generic request for an evidentiary 11 hearing. (Dkt. 63 at 15.) In his memorandum in support of the petition, Petitioner 12 specifically requested an evidentiary hearing on Claim Eight, IAC at sentencing (Dkt. 64 13 at 40), a claim which the Court dismissed as procedurally barred (Dkt. 86). In its Order of 14 September 22, 2000, the Court denied Petitioner's motion for an evidentiary hearing without 15 prejudice. (Dkt. 86 at 17.) The Court determined that the request had been premature and 16 invited Petitioner to renew the motion in his brief addressing the merits of non-17 procedurally-defaulted claims. (Id.) In his merits brief, Petitioner did not renew his request 18 for evidentiary development. (Dkt. 90.) However, his reply includes a general request that 19 the Court to hold an evidentiary hearing "in order that he may have an opportunity to 20 develop and further establish these Claims." (Dkt. 101 at 89.) The Court concludes, after 21 reviewing the record, that none of Petitioner's properly-exhausted claims warrant 22 evidentiary development because the allegations contained therein, even if true, do not 23 entitle him to habeas relief.

24 CONCLUSION

25 The Court finds that Petitioner has failed to establish entitlement to habeas relief on 26 any of his claims. The Court further finds that an evidentiary hearing in this matter is 27 neither warranted nor required.

1 Based on the foregoing,

2 IT IS ORDERED that Petitioner's Amended Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus 3 (Dkt. 63) is DENIED. The Clerk of Court shall enter judgment accordingly.

4 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the stay of execution entered by this Court on 5 December 17, 1998, is VACATED.

6 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Court forward a copy of this Order to 7 Noel Dessaint, Clerk of the Arizona Supreme Court, 1501 W. Washington, Phoenix, AZ 8 85007-3329.

9 DATED this 9th day of January, 2007.
